[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The burning to death of two sisters last year to atone for a "blasphemy" against the "holy ghost" when he was 12 years old, and the murder of his father, mother, brother, wife and his official penance for the killing of his sisters, confessed by Frank McDowell, 19, and his weird tale of "hazy spells" and hallucinations, during which he believed his family aligned with "the anti-Christ," stood forth today as related details of one of the most gruesome murders in the history of southern crime.

SLUR AT HARDING
Three Separate Causes of Action Are Cited in Petition
As Filed.

BULLETIN.

New York—Frank A. Vanderlip, retired banker, a member of the Senate, filed against him yesterday by the owners of the Marion Star declared he welcomed the suit and expressed the hope that it would be the forerunner of "court proceedings that would make public some of the news that the great newspapers did not see fit to print."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

New York—Roy D. Moore and Louis H. Brush, joint owners of the Marion Star are plaintiffs in federal court against Frank A. Vanderlip, retired banker, for $600,000 alleging slander and libel and resulting from his bank's prompted statement in Investigating on Feb. 12. Three separate causes of action, each asking $200,000 damages, are cited in their petition on file today.

The papers assert Mr. Vanderlip maliciously charged Brush and Moore with bribing former President Harding to fail to perform certain of his official duties as president, and that the bribe consisted in the payment to the former president of $55,000 in the purchase of the Marion Star, which was more than twice its fair value.

Attack on Harding

It was charged, was an attack upon the integrity of the late president by implying that the sale of his newspaper was involved in the naval oil reserve leases.

It was further charged that Vanderlip statements accused the plaintiffs of "being financially irresponsible and incapable of obligations and not entitled to credit." In consequence "the market value of the preferred and common stock (of the newspaper) has been greatly reduced and the plaintiffs have suffered great damage because thereof."

Attack on Speyer

The second cause of action was based upon the charge that Mr. Vanderlip caused his speech to be printed in the New York Tribune.

The third cause is based upon the admission of Mr. Vanderlip before the senate investigating committee that he approved the copy of the speech which was read in the Senate Feb. 12, by a representative of the Associated Press and which was later transmitted to the Associated Press members.

DEADLOCK BROKEN IN DOCK STRIKE; BALLOT ON TERMS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

London—England awoke today to find the apparently hopeless deadlock in the dock strike broken.

Representatives of the dock workers and employers, meeting at the ministry of labor, arrived at terms of agreement in the early hours of the morning.

The terms will be submitted to a conference of the dockers' delegates from all sections of the country, and should they meet with the approval of the men, work will be resumed immediately, relieving the tax bill. Leaders, however, decided to adjourn late in the day out of respect to his memory.

Indications are that this approval will be forthcoming.

BIGGEST DAIRY SHOW WILL BE HELD IN STATE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Madison—Official notification that the officers and Milwaukee officials had been accepted for the national dairy show in Milwaukee next fall was received today by O. J. Remey, secretary of the state fair, and J. D. Jones, commissioner of agriculture.

These hallucinations occurred annually, he said, until last year he felt impelled to kill his sisters as atonement for his "blasphemous sin." McDowell, when asked what this sin was, refused to answer.

Murder Is "Penance"

After he had been arrested in Milwaukee, he said, his mind again became clear and he realized the seriousness of his crime, but did not reveal to any one what he had done.

Last Tuesday, the anniversary of his "sin," he said that he must kill his parents as sacrifice and penance for the murder of his sisters, he said.

On Tuesday night, McDowell told his wife he went to bed in the room adjoining that in which his father and mother slept, without any thought of violence. He dreamed that he was commanded by voices to kill his father and mother. So vivid and realistic was the dream, he said, that he awoke, went into the adjoining room and fired five shots from a 32-caliber revolver at his mother and father.

He then lay down again in the room adjoining that in which his father and mother slept, without any thought of violence. He dreamed that he was commanded by voices to kill his father and mother. So vivid and realistic was the dream, he said, that he awoke, went into the adjoining room and fired five shots from a 32-caliber revolver at his mother and father.

Shot While Asleep

Both Mr. and Mrs. McDowell were shot through the right temple. McDowell burns indicated, according to investigating authorities, that the shots had been fired from close range. Officers found both the man and woman in sleeping positions, with nothing to indicate that they had not passed from sleep into death.

The crime committed, and his mind again rational, Frank said he had the revolver in the bottom of his trunk, bumped his head against a door to support a story that his parents had been murdered and that he had been known to have a revolver.

He described the scenes of the entrance to the home to support his first assertion that he had heard a commotion in his parents' room and had been knocked senseless by the escaping murderer.

A jury last night returned a verdict that Mr. and Mrs. McDowell had come to the dockers from Ireland to be killed and that their son had been indicted by their son. The jury recommended that the youth be held on a charge of murder without bail.

Whitewater's Great Need for Action.

In the treasury of the state is $250,000 appropriated two years ago for the building of a new structure at Whitewater for the state normal school. In the school there are 210 more students than ever before. They are young men and women seeking in this place for an education and most of them are anticipating the use of that education to all them in making a livelihood. They need more room; they need it now. It may be that the authorities do not appreciate how emphatically that need is pressing at this time. There are no books for the school to supply the students there; the state has quibbled about that point. But that is another story. The architects' plans for the new building have been submitted to the governor and await his approval before bids are advertised and contract let. It will be on into May at the best, before anything definite can be done to get the structure going if action is not taken very soon. What is the matter that we have so much delay? Here is a great school heavily handicapped, after a legislature has made the appropriation, by inaction of administrative authorities.

Uncle Hiram Haversack says he laughs every time he thinks of Mr. McAdoo calling himself up over the telephone.

Paying Postoffice Employees

We hope that congress will give heed to the petitions of the postal clerks and city letter carriers for the passage of House Resolution 5552 introduced by Congressman Paige of Massachusetts. It asks for an increase in pay of $200 in the minimum grade to $600 for the maximum grades of post office clerks and carriers. This is a most just demand and should receive the unanimous vote of the house and senate and become a law. No class of employees in any private business is so poorly paid or so hedged about by rules and barriers to promotion. There will come a day, perhaps, when we shall select our postmasters, not by political favor, or payment of debts by congressmen, but by merit in the postoffice business itself. Skilled workers, trained from the ground up are more and more required in the postoffices of the country. It has become a specialized business and should be recognized by payment of a wage of salary in keeping with the responsibility.

Russia Wants All or None.

In commenting on the recognition of the soviet government by Great Britain, the Gazette, a few weeks ago, said that there were strings attached of a sort much as had been suggested by Secretary Hughes in discussing the attitude of the United States. There are treaties to consider, commercial questions at issue and other collateral requisites in the British recognition which do not set well on the Russian diplomatic stomach. So the new premier has given it out as a kind of ultimatum, that Russia must be recognized as she is. "Take me as I am," without down or hope of anything in the future is the soviet plan. Even Ramsay MacDonald hesitates about that action and well he may, for he has no assurance that the future has anything better for Britain than what Russia pleases to give. In fact recognition is to be all one-sided and that is to be the soviet side.

Plain Talk to Mr. Haynes

Mr. Haynes is out again telling what he has done. "What we say to Mr. Haynes is plain talk from Truthful James." If he spent more time getting the big bootleggers and rich and powerful jungs which have made jests of enforcement, he will accomplish more than he does by telling about the little fellows he has put in jail. You do not stop a flood by dipping out the water when it is lapping the shore; you dam it at its source and stop its flow near the head of the stream. Mr. Haynes and his idea of law enforcement is to use a sieve instead of a dipper to stop this flood, and then tell about the work. Prohibition is here to stay and eventually it will be looked at as something other than a sort of political steamboat which has to stop every time the whistle blows because the steam is exhausted.

New Idea in Medical Practice

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington.—The idea that people with certain mental characteristics are most likely to contract certain physical diseases is now being advanced.

Doctors have from time to time noted that persons suffering from different chronic diseases are apt to be depressed or excitable or selfish or unreasonable. It has been supposed that the disease affected the mind and character of the patient.

Not so long ago a British specialist wrote: "I believe that tuberculosis has a distinct and often a well-marked influence on the mentality of its victims."

Now, the question is raised as to whether the mental traits might not have preceded the disease. We are asked to consider the proposition that a certain personality is more apt to fall a prey to cancer and that the person of another, different type of mind is more prone to succumb to tuberculosis.

Pioneer research in this line has just been reported by Dr. A. H. Muhl, a young woman physician and psychiatrist. The subjects of the experiment were 30 girls and women suffering from tuberculosis, whereas the mental characteristics which may go with cancer or diabetes have not been recognized or studied to any extent.

The optimism of tubercular patients, in particular, is noted by most observers of the disease. Even when there is no chance of recovery, consumptives often appear cheerful and unduly hopeful. Doctors have never fully understood why this should be so. Dr. Muhl determined to analyze this optimism and if possible to find out what might lie back of it.

The 30 subjects of the experiment ranged in age from 4 years to 60. They were in various stages of the disease, and they represented all walks of life and all stages of culture. Most of them were hospital patients. Five had no normal persons. That is, they always adjusted themselves successfully and satisfactorily to their surroundings.

By use of an elaborate outline that covered the mental, medical and social history of each patient, the personality of the patient was revealed. Some of the points could be learned by asking simple questions. Other points were discovered only indirectly and after long acquaintance with the individual. In some cases it was necessary to resort to psychosynthesis in order to trace out obscure reasons for mental attitudes. Eventually, the outlines were complete, and it remained for the doctor to interpret them, and to show whether these 20 typical patients had any significant traits in common.

The mind of any human being is extremely complex and it is impossible to explain here all of the mental factors which the study of the patients revealed. A long list of traits were found to be common to all of them.

One of the most striking points shown is that the consumptive patient, from the child of four to the elderly woman, is torn to an unusual degree between ambition and inertia. Ambition drives the individual on to expend energy in all sorts of ways, while inertia makes the effort of doing things seem at times insurmountable. This means a prodigal misuse of energy which is believed to be the cause rather than the result of the individual's breakdown.

It is a well known fact that the majority of people are infected with tuberculosis in early childhood but in most cases the body is able to throw off the effects of infection and the disease never becomes active. The doctor fits this fact into his theory by saying:

"Many of these patients got their infections in early childhood and took care of them for years, only to break with the disease in adult life—why? Because when they struck some particular period of stress which required still more energy for adjustment, the reserve, never so great as in the average person, was used up, and they had no enough left to take care of the physical difficulties."

If you accept this energy problem as typical of every tubercular patient—and it was found in varying degrees in all of the 30 cases analyzed—you at once come to the question of whether it is going to be necessary to treat the mental condition of patients suffering from what we think of as purely physical disease. This has not been done to any extent. Expert psychiatrists are far from numerous. And a tuberculous hospital of 200 beds would require two or three experts to make a thorough study of all cases.

Perhaps the specialist of the future will be skilled not only in the physical but also in the mental lore of a particular disease. Psychotherapy would be used to advantage in addition to routine treatment for tuberculosis to teach the patient how to release certain energy-tying trends and how to restrain other energy-expending traits, thus obtaining a fund of reserve energy so much needed for the process of getting well."

How superficial mental traits may mislead a physician who is concerned chiefly with physical symptoms is indicated by the unexpected findings in regard to the proverbial optimism of the tubercular. According to the personality outlines of the 20 patients' every one was of a temperament that is easily elated and easily depressed. The tubercular patient may be buoyantly cheerful one hour and the victim of the blues the next. But she does not often reveal the extent of depression to those about her. About half of the women of the experiment candidly admitted to the doctor that they were often depressed while the other half denied it. Some who said they were never depressed later admitted that they didn't wish to say anything about being low spirited because to do so didn't seem quite like playing the game."

Conceded pessimism was further revealed in other points of the outline. Disappointments or annoyances which would seem slight to most people were a cause of deep-rooted resentment or worry to these patients.

No attempt at psychotherapy was made during the experiment, but many of the patients benefited from the limited amount of analysis done in order to obtain data for the study.

The conclusion is that tuberculosis is still very much of a mystery, because a physical disease is not merely like an isolated defect in a piece of machinery. There are three factors, each of which influences the others. One is the physical condition, which has been studied so that a great deal is known about the clinical aspect of tuberculosis, the symptoms and possible courses of treating them. The second factor is the mental condition of the patient which is just beginning to be regarded as important. It is still a novel idea that a patient with a physical ailment should be treated by a psychiatrist. Perhaps it should be made plain that there is no implication that the sufferer from tuberculosis or other chronic disease is abnormal mentally.

It is the need for higher salaries for members of the Wisconsin legislature, before the people. That is a most wise move and should succeed. Others have tried it and failed when it came to a vote. The pliant paid members of the legislature is disgraceful. We could abandon a few hundred inspectors and save enough to pay the increase in salaries where they should be.

Why go to Africa to shoot big game? Here's a gangster in Kansas City who won $30,000 shooting two games of African golf.

Up to date the Dawes commission has done more in a month to bring peace nearer, than the league of nations in four years.

JUST FOLKS

BY EDGAR A. GUEST.

WHERE THE CHILDREN MEET
There's a little house on a humble street
With a little porch where the children meet,
And when school is out
You can hear them shout.
An arm glads as they race about:
"To the garden again!"
They totally come,
And the passers-by
With a careful eye
Must watch for the wagons rolling there.

Now many a house on this street is trim
With a grass plot neat and the windows trim,
And a lovely sight,
Is the garden bright.
But it's too soon for a paper flight:
"So the children play."
Where the maid won't fly to the door and say:
"Get out in the street
With your dirty feet!"
Don't you know that I washed that porch to day?"

There is always a house on every street
That is known as the place where the children meet.
You can pick it out
As you walk about,
For it is there where the youngsters laugh and shout:

And the grass is bare
And the toys are there.
And the wire fence sags where the lads have swung.
And the paint is nicked
Where their feet have kicked
And a window shows where ball was hung.

And I think as I walk on that humble street,
Let mine be the house where the children meet.
Let mine be the place where
Where they romp and race.
I can open that door with a smiling face.
Let this army tramp
In my yard, and camp
So long as they will, for the years roll on
And the day draws near.
When the silence here
Will tell to the world that our babies have gone.

SPUR OF THE MOMENT

SUCH IS FAME
From an advertisement of a motion picture theater: "Charles Hutchinson's IF WINTER COMES."

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1924.

This is rather an uncertain day, according to astrology. With Mars is in a malefic aspect.

The planetary government favors women more than men today, making for success in love affairs and disappointment in business.

There is a sign most threatening to lovers of peace, and excitement regarding a phase of international relations is prognosticated.

This is not a favorable day for any major surgical operation and is not particularly fortunate for hospitals, which may be overcrowded and subject to many needs.

Businessmen and contractors should delay any important new work. This is not a lucky day for signing contracts.

Theaters and places of entertainment should benefit from this sway, which makes for popularity of stars and big box office receipts.

Women should make the most of this aspect which promises much in business.

Lovers may be more ardent than constant while the stars are poised as they are in this configuration, and divorces will both increase greatly in the coming year, which will develop new and startling social conditions.

The rule is not promising for good literature for writers are still subject to influences making for lack of spirituality.

Again Mercury warns not to sign leases or contracts under this direction of the stars.

One of the indications is that much personal publicity will be reflected in its effect and he who seeks political favor should be particularly cautious.

Persons whose birthday it is should cultivate a calm and confident spirit during the coming year, which may be very happy. Young widows will be particularly in favor with suitors.

Children born on this day probably will be steady and persevering, yet highly imaginative. These subjects of Pisces usually hold important positions and rise rapidly in life.

"It don't seem to get along with me," grumbled the disgruntled sheriff.

"I seem to," said the girl. "Is that three men already?" she went on.

"Three men! What's what?" grunted Stu. "You're joining right in. Ha! Three men. That's pretty good. But you won't need three men. I'll get these things myself."

Dolly gasped. Such monumental conceit as this she had never met before. Was the man actually serious? She perceived that he was.

"I don't know exactly. I'll have to skirmish around some first. I'll have to go to St. Louis later maybe. Suppose you tell me all you know about your father and mother. Get a pencil and paper, so I can write down a few notes."

"Old man!" snapped the sheriff. These mutton-dressed-lamb fashions are offensive about the advancing to years. "Old man! I want you to years—"

"Sweet and twenty then," the Interrogated. "I have if your own way. Anything. Anything. I'm not arguing with you. Turn back to the first page. I know you're rough. Go on from there."

"I never said it was. I'm listening patiently, old young fellow, I mean."

"I'd like to be your friend. If you'd only be sensible for a minute. Oh, these dyed Mustaches, whose burning desire is to be friendly to a boy."

"All right. I'm sensible. Go on."

Her features were sufficiently composed but was there a sarcastic twinkle in her eyes? He couldn't be sure. He would have been tickled pink to don Els' harshest catchpoll aspect and put her through what is now so unfavorably known as the third degree. But the idea of her money unnerved him.

He leaned forward, hands on knees, his face wearing, like a garment, a most whining expression. "Your uncle's holding something out on you."

Now Judge Dolan and Bill Derr, now the sheriff. "You think so?" she said, smiling.

"Think so? I know so. Look at the way he acted them in the office. Gave himself dead away. Depend upon it, young lady, he's got a lot of your money tucked away somewhere."

Ah, there he was! The colored brother like the cordwood was poking out again.

It always in general hadn't been so plagued serious. Dolly would have blushed in the sheriff's face. As it was she did not even smile.

"Suppose there is some money, which I doubt. What of it?"

"You'll be needing somebody to help you get it," he declared. "Somebody who's fair and square and on the level. Somebody who can't be bluffed. Somebody who—"

The driver did his best to dodge, but was unsuccessful, and, being a decent sort, put out of the car and carried the remains of the unfortunate hence into its owner's garden.

The latter, a Jerry woman, raged at him as if he had committed a deliberate murder.

When he could manage to get a word in, he tried to pacify her.

"You're very angry, madam. I assure you, the dog and I shall be happy to replace your dog."

The woman glared at him.

BASEBALL this year, nothing next year, hopes the following year and baseball again three years hence, that's the way many of the towns of Wisconsin and many states of the Union are here going at it for every boyeller, whose native home is up at Chippewa Falls, but who is in Janesville a great deal of the time, was talking the other night of the conditions up in his old territory. Two years ago he managed Chippewa team, but last year didn't do so well, his business as a cobbler seems kept him going too much. Discussing last year's team in that city, he said that they were going fine until toward the end of the season the fans began shouting that they must win through to the end. Second string Americans, mostly pitchers, were brought down from St. Paul and they worked on the mound and on the pocketbooks, as well. So it went, until at the end of the season, instead of being on top of things the management was in the hole for $700.

CHANCES ARE that this year, the pennants will not dip down again when prospects are for a deficit at the end of the season, the same as in past seasons. Somehow, it is not realized that when the largest gate that may be drawn in so many of these cities is $600, that receipts from the crowds cannot be compared to the kind of baseball going institution—at least not a self-supporting one. The home boys do their bit well for the greater part of the season, bring good reports to the town and then when the crucial time comes, fans quit their trust in them, cold and turn the cash over to outsiders. It is strange how the ball players stand for it.

EDLER said he had heard of the success of the Southern Wisconsin League last year and thought he believed the day was out when there is a natural division between towns, and the fans are given to understand plainly from the first of the season that it will be impossible to go out later in the year to hire "winner" players, they accept the conditions and are better boosters. Players who know there are not too many to be shopped later, discount the idea that some fans outside might come in and cash in play with more heart and with greater enthusiasm. The boys in the town take to playing baseball, because they have become interested in knowing the local heroes of the diamond and are more interested in seeing the wins to getting on the home team. One of the greatest dangers of hired ball players, brought in from the larger cities, is that it is killing off the participating interest of boys. Stoughton has had that experience perhaps more than any town in southern Wisconsin. Ask them about it.

Minnesota swimmers beat Wisconsin, 27-21, Gophers tying conference record in relay. Esther Behring, Newark, N. J., sets world's record, throwing baseball 85 ft., 9 in.

Central states A. A. U. Olympic trials to be held at University of Michigan, May 30.

J. H. Luther, former basketball captain, signs as coach at Cornell.

SCRAPS ABOUT SCRAPPERS. Thirty rounds of mailings on card to be held in stock pavilion at local fair grounds, Thursday, 8:30 p. m. Hobby Eber, Canadian bantamweight champion, given decision over "Chalky" Wilmer, White, at Toronto (100). Jim White, New York, 125, heavyweight, unable to beat Tommy Gibbons at Grand Rapids, Mich. Finally, because of ankle broken in training—Pope must get $50,000 by March 1 to assure forfeit for Willy bout—Tender's hands go bad again and may force him from ring—Gruy may probe New York to get out and make another revolver. Bickford, Bremen, Battling Siki hands in Key West jail for creating disturbance—New combinator takes hold of scrapping at East Chicago.

International skating races at Lake Placid delayed by snow.

BASKETBALL DRIBBLES. Displaying great defense, LaCrosse normal beats Milwaukee teachers, 33-17, and gives them hold on first—Bradley beats Milliken, 31-24—University of Chicago invites best prep teams to meet, Apr. 1-5—Purdue beats Northwestern, 37-25, breaking second place tie with Chicago—Wiley, beat Dartmouth, 20-25.

Art Schinner, Milwaukee handball champ, loses in national meet at Detroit.

THE HOT STOVE LEAGUE. Illness was cause of Gleason's retirement from baseball—Sister of St. Paul leaves midwest coast for training camp at Mobile—Story persons that Edna Collins has been made manager of White Sox—Shoemaker reported to have been given $1,000 raise by St. Louis—Wally Schang, Yankee catcher, signs up—Wichita club of Western League to train at home this spring—Manager Kilmer driving camp to the French recess to discuss Cincinnati contract.
